Smell the Rain

The rain clouds of abundance are about to burst open. My paths drip with abundance for there is grace to supply all things and to give you the ability to give to every good need. There is also now the wisdom to know the difference between what I am calling you to give to and what I am asking you to leave alone.

It is the goodness of a father's love to care for his children, and I have done that through the sacrifice of My Son. Now the inheritance has been given to all My children to walk in My paths of obedience and truth where, by faith, needs are met.

In this hour I have been separating true stewards from the ways of mammon and greed that have been embraced by many. The true path of inheritance is a pure path where the only motive is to give up all your "rights" to embrace all of My ways, and the mortification of the impurities on this path has been somewhat painful, for I have had to separate the pure out of the impure in the sons who have heard My call and responded to it. My stewards are rising out of the streams of truth and the rivers of holiness and it makes this Father glad.

My Spirit has been waiting to release My plans at the graduation from the "schools of preparedness," and now diplomas are being handed out and the emerging from hiddenness is the hour that is at hand.

The theme of fellowship has been a part of every phase of this "school of preparedness" and many, many have answered the call to fellowship, laying aside everything else, for fellowship is the pure foundation and the depths of the foundation of every wise steward.

Take all you have learned in this training in fellowship and continue in it as you see change come and circumstances change, for the fellowship will remain the same. And I look forward to the fellowship in this next phase of the journey as My sons walk in the provision that comes by My hand.

Look up beyond your circumstances and smell the rain.
