The Compassion That Is of My Spirit

Many are hearing the call to step out of the ways of the compassion that is from the soul and not of My spirit. The compassion that is of My spirit is empowered by My grace and operates out of My mind. Conversely, the compassion that is of the human soul is out of man's own strength, his own will, and is led by man's own reasonings.

One way of compassion will require you to start and finish the task out of the operation of the soul, and the other way will require cooperation with My Spirit as you are led by My nature within you. This leadership will always have divine wisdom available to it.

One way of compassion will often bask in the sense of self-accomplishment and the other way will humbly acknowledge the work of My grace in heartfelt gratitude. The compassion that is of the soul can sometimes be hard to distinguish when it is the familiar way of operating, but praying in tongues will release the mortifying of the soul's way of compassion and bring forward My compassion.

This is a season of freedom. Some of those things that have held on and brought confusion concerning the operation of My spirit will see their departure during this season. Because of the things that lie ahead, it is important that the needs of people are met through the leadership of My spirit rather than the reasonings of the soul.

While it is true that many good deeds are done in the name of compassion, when it is done out of the wisdom of My mind and the leadership of My spirit it will be pure and it will be powerful, and I will always be on display in you for who I really am.

So to the many who have questioned and wrestled with My truth and My ways, be encouraged: There is a dividing of soul and spirit available during this season that My grace is moving you into, and the dividing will bring understanding, which is always the door to freedom. As you continue to pray out the mysteries of My ways and My life in you, you shall see changes your heart has cried out for.
