Not Only My Servant but My Slave

Who is it that comes to Me, comes to Me, comes to Me that wants all that I have? Who is this of you that is exempt from becoming not only My servant, but My slave? Who is it of you that would arrive where you want to go and who will not pick this path up and walk in it?

For many, many before you have come this way and generally [have] been destroyed a long time before this time that you are sitting in—in what I have to say to you. Understand this: The many, many who went down a certain limb, and at the end of the limb it was over, and still another, higher and on another limb. But I have waited out the generations, waited out the centuries for people to come and, in their journey, get close enough to Me that I might pour out upon them all that I am.

For you that are of strong character, hear this: For in these meetings, depending upon the strength of your character, you are going to find out all you need to walk out into everything I said you could do. And you will destroy the works of the enemy.

When I saw that, I saw strongholds of civilizations of people who needed a revival.
