Have Courage—Keep Your Feet Planted Firm

You know in every attack, there is always some truth, but it's not about the truth here. He is talking about those of you who have been under an attack by people around you, maybe people close. Usually that is how it goes—maybe someone you respect or something. But there is like “mouths” where you want to just say, “Get your mouth off of me.” They are talking about you. They are belittling you, what you do.

The Lord would say to you to hold fast to what He thinks about you and to plant your feet firmer into where you are. And it will come and it will go, so do not be discouraged—plant your feet.

Sometimes when I made mistakes in the past, especially when I would be young and I would preach and I would say something out of order or wrong and I wasn't happy with how I preached, I would have to encourage myself by saying, “Well, it is okay because next time you see me, I will be better.”

You know, maybe you have made some mistakes in the past. You said something you shouldn't have said. You have done something you shouldn't have done. We have all done that, and there is a part of getting past that to say, “You know what? I messed up, but I am moving forward.” And have that courage to know that you are moving forward.

You are moving past that. So even if what they are saying about you holds some truth, move past it and keep your feet planted firm. Be where God tells you to be. Do what He says.

He believes in you. You have someone who believes in you. You can do it.
